This is a member of the Penguin Moderns series, which are true pocket-sized books. It has 52 small pages and is a book of essays by George Orwell, all first published in 1945 (1). All three essays are linked to nationalism. Although it feels dated, it is important to take them in context, in their time and place.

his essay on nationalism, George Orwell paints a picture of the cerebral underpinnings of the contemporaneous forms of nationalism which existed in Britain in 1945. Orwell identifies three distinct branches of nationalism which he identifies as positive, transferred, and negative nationalism. He then divides each branch into sub-branches, which he elaborates further.

Notes on Nationalism. This material remains under copyright and is reproduced by kind permission of the Orwell Estate and Penguin Books. Somewhere or other Byron makes use of the French word longeur, and remarks in passing that though in England we happen not to have the word, we have the thing in considerable profusion. In the same way, there is a habit of mind which is now so widespread that it affects our thinking on nearly every subject, but which has not yet been given a name.
