that focuses on creating a continuous stream of income. His financial game plan helps you achieve a "triple-double" and overcome the three great risks of retirement: -Bad timing-retiring before you're ready or right before a downturn in the markets -Inflation-having your money lose purchasing power over time -Longevity-living longer than you expected or longer than you can afford Chances are your pension, Social Security, and 401(k)s as they stand may not be enough for the long game. You need your nest egg to work harder in the last quarter so you can maintain your desired lifestyle. It's time to put Your Retirement Game Plan into action to help provide a lifetime of inflation-adjusted income...and win!

American cities continue to experience profound fiscal crises. Falling revenues cannot keep pace with the increased costs of vital public services, infrastructure development and improvement, and adequately funded pensions. Chicago presents an especially vivid example of these issues, as the state of Illinois's rocky fiscal condition compounds the city's daunting budget challenges. In The People's Money, Michael A. Pagano curates a group of essays that emerged from discussions at the 2018 UIC Urban Forum. The contributors explore fundamental questions related to measuring the fiscal health of cities, including how cities can raise revenue, the accountability of today's officials for the
